Finding artistic expression in poetry, literature, and music, Lera Auerbach stands at the forefront of 21st century creative artists. She is a true polymath of universal scope.

One of the most widely performed composers of the new generation, this outrageously talented Russian-born artist is also an award-winning poetry and prose writer, and a pianist of international standing.

Auerbach is published by Hamburg’s prestigious International Music Publishing Hans Sikorski, home to Prokofiev, Shostakovich, Schnittke, Gubaidulina and Kancheli.

Her literary works include five books of poetry and prose, two novels and numerous contributions to Russian-language newspapers and magazines. In 1996, she was named Poet of the Year by the International Pushkin Society and was awarded the poetry prize of the Novoye Russkoye Slovo, the largest Russian-language newspaper in the West.

"Nobel Laureate Joseph Brodsky considered Lera as his successor in poetry. "Sorokolunie", a volume of selected works of Lera Auerbach, is a clear proof of the prophetic vision of the contemporary classic."

Sergei Fomichev
Pushkin Commission
Russian Academy of Science
“Auerbach shares with her Soviet-era predecessors a sense of the tragic, which comes through in an intense chromaticism and floating lines, as well as in energetically virtuosic sections that evoke a struggle against dark forces.”

The New York Times

Sergei Yurski

“Her language is very much her own. She composes in big gestures that exploit extremes of dynamics, timbre, register, dissonance and consonance to powerfully dramatic effect.”

Chicago Tribune

“I have been in a constant state of amazement at her actual genius. She is a young woman who is part of the great humanistic tradition. She is a Poly-Artist, one that is more needed than ever in our skeptical society.”

David Dubal

“I was simply shocked at the maturity and depth which is contained in them (Lera Auerbach’s literary works). It is unbelievable! Truly a great talent.”

Sofia Gubaidulina

“As an artist, Lera Auerbach is an integral part of both America and Russia. She has been living and creating in the space of world culture. In music as well as in poetry she has already reached a high level of complex poetical symbolism, bringing a unique world-outlook into her works and musical performances.”

Alexei Kasakov
